Your Honour,

I am writing this statement on behalf of Charles, who is set to appear before you in court for a drug-related charge.

As a manager, I have known a lot of people, but Charles has always been very special to me because of his courage and resilience. We met 6 years ago at a marriage party and have seen each other ever since in a capacity.

Although he had a tough time growing up, with one parent's abuse. Charles has worked hard to overcome these obstacles and contribute to his community in a meaningful way. I can personally attest to his impact here.

I am aware that Charles has been charged with this offence, and that this is a serious crime. I also know that he has struggled with this problem in the past. It has been a difficult road, and Charles has made great strides by counselling, attending AA, finding an assisted living, etc. He understands that this behaviour has a hugely negative impact on his health, relationships, and the community at large. Charles has a supportive, loving network of family and friends, and he is turning to them for help in addressing this problem in a healthy, solution-based way.

I believe that Charles's situation would become more difficult with a criminal record because of negative reasons. Charles has made great strides in beating back the effects of his upbringing, and he is determined to learn and grow from this setback as well.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Carl R. Tuck
