Dear Sir,

My name is Joshua Alvarez, I have known Michael M. Plain for a number of years as his roommate acquaintance pastor, and I have a number-year history as a legal professional (ideally). New evidence has come to light concerning Joshua's attempted CTS offence, and he is arguing for a legal unconditional general pardon.

While I am aware that my position does not permit me to contest the decision made by the court, I nonetheless remain firmly a supporter of Michael's innocence, universally known for his antipathy towards violence in addition to having respect for all life. Michael is a one-of-a-kind person in our community for his great professional accomplishments and dedication to helping others. He is from a loving family of names ages and sexes who are devoted to his profession. He is a respected colleague for her well-known job assisting homeless people, prisoners, and injured people.

While often assumed to be socially problematic, Joshua happens to be a valuable individual resource. He, as far as I know, has never injured, threatened, or mistreated any person in any way. He is a stern, moral individual who has worked hard and persisted. Please get in touch with me if you have any other questions.

Thank you,
Joshua S. Alvarez
