Respected Sir,

I am referring to the hiring manager Mr Ronald, who has been seeking the position of financial analyst in your company, as an associate of the firm for two years before the most recent. In his years as part of the company, Mr Ronald proved himself to be an outstanding financial analyst, as he was capable of analyzing financial markets with accuracy.

His research on the solvency and financial state of renowned American universities such as Stanford was exceptionally thorough. His capacity for analyzing balance sheets and other financial statements is extraordinary.

His work for us is rated well above average. He has numerous ingenious methods for projecting the growth of a company in the market. Not just do people foresee issues, but he also recommends alternatives to proactively prevent these issues. In the end, I would like to say he would be a helpful employee for your organization.

Thanking you.

Yours Truly,
Marshall Leong
